The School Garden

On Saturday morning, Leo walked through the school garden with his class. The air was cool, and tiny drops of rain shone on the leaves. Near the wooden shed, he spotted a sleepy hedgehog curled beneath a pile of dry leaves. The class stayed silent so it would not be frightened.

At the far end of the garden, bright yellow flowers grew beside a narrow, muddy path. A bumblebee rested on one flower. Leo watched as it gently brushed the pollen from its legs. Then he saw a robin perched on the lowest branch of an apple tree. Its orange-red breast stood out against the green leaves.

Before going inside, the children filled a small bowl with fresh water for the birds. They left the garden tidy and promised to visit again next week.
